

ABSTRACT

An Internet based music collaboration system is disclosed in which musicians and/or vocalists at client locations transmit audio signals to a server location where the audio signals are combined into a composite musical work and sent back to each of the client locations. The work may be sent back as a composite musical signal which is the concatenation of all individual audio signals or as a mix of audio signals.